COVER: An adult individual of Canelos Treefrog (Ecnomiohyla tuberculosa) collected in a tree hole during a herpetological survey, carried out by the Field Museum, in the Putumayo basin at the Peruvian Amazonia. The Canelos Treefrog is one of the most enigmatic Neotropical frogs and its occurrence has been documented at scattered localities along the upper Amazon basin of Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru. Although the phylogenetic position and natural history of this species remains a mystery, it is currently under investigation by a team of herpetologists from Ecuador and Peru led by Dr. Santiago Ron. Photograph: Pablo J. Venegas.
